Amal Unbound, by Aisha Saeed (Nancy Paulsen Books, $17.99) "Amal is living a decent life in her Pakistani village. She loves school and plans to go to college and become a teacher. But when she offends a member of the most influential family in the village, her dreams and goals are suddenly upended and she is sold as a servant to pay her father's 'debts.' Saeed takes on challenging subjects—indentured servitude and the treatment of women—and makes them accessible to a middle reader, while making the reader cheer for Amal as she finds her way again." —Melissa Fox, Watermark Books & Café, Wichita, KS

For Teen Readers

I Felt a Funeral, in My Brain: A Novel, by Will Walton (Push, $17.99) "Avery has a lot to deal with—recuperating from a serious injury, coming to terms with his family history of alcoholism, navigating his changing relationship with his best friend, and coping with the death of his beloved grandfather. In Walton's capable hands and original voice, Avery's difficult summer is full of tenderness, wit. I Felt a Funeral, in My Brain is a book for anyone who has ever been moved by a poem or a song, anyone who is or has been an adolescent, and anyone who has or will ever experience loss and grief—which is to say, here is a book for all of us." —Emilie Sommer, East City Bookshop, Washington, DC
